

MARKET EXPANSION URGED BY GROWERS

Organization of Local Association Advocated as Means of Selling Melon Crops.

PLAN FOUND SATISFACTORY

Growers in Each Locality Employ a Manager to Look After Shipments and Collections.

That they might have the advantage of an efficient system of marketing, insuring the best prices for quality melons and prompter returns from the buyers, melon growers in Jackson county are giving attention to the organization of local associations. One such organization has already been effective among the growers in Brownstown and the manager is getting in touch with probable buyers and making arrangements for prompt shipments at the highest prevailing prices. Another organization is being contemplated there and growers at Vallonia and Reddington are almost considering the advisability of entering into such an arrangement.

Growers from experience have learned they are handicapped when they sell their crops independently as they frequently have trouble in finding ready buyers when their melons are ready for shipment. Usually the market is flooded at the time local melons are ripening and it is known that many commission men take advantage of this situation to buy the best quality at a low price. When the grower sells independently of all others he is not in a position to know just what the market price is when he ships and often suffers considerable loss.

When the growers of one locality effect a selling organization one man known as the manager is placed in charge of the shipments and it is his duty to find the best markets. The manager is busy long before the crop ripens and even before the seeds are planted. He gets in touch with the managers of large hotels, dining car service and with the reliable commission dealers in the large cities and enters into an agreement with them concerning the sale of the melons which will be shipped by him.

Each grower is given a number or is distinguished in some other manner and as soon as his barrels or baskets of melons are delivered to the station they are marked with his number. In this manner trace is kept of them from the time they are placed under the control of the manager until the grower receives a check. Under such a system the grower does not have to bother about the sale of his crop as his work ends as soon as the melons are delivered to the manager and a receipt is given for them. This allows the grower more time to look after his crop and most of them have found that when the association is properly conducted that the returns are greater without the detailed work in connection with the marketing of the crop.

Hundreds of acres in Jackson county are planted in watermelons and canteloupes each year. The acreage is not as large now as it was several years ago, it is stated, largely because of the unsatisfactory marketing conditions. When the crops are sold through the express companies delay is frequently encountered in making settlement. The express companies are not responsible except for prompt delivery and the matter of settlement is left for the grower and the buyer to thrash out later. It is said that some of the growers have not yet received payment for melons that were shipped last year to commission merchants and are anxious to join in organizing a local association so they can avoid the experience this year.

A meeting will be held at the Reddington Thursday afternoon at which time County Agent Cobb will present the plans on behalf of a number of melon growers who desire to effect an organization in that locality.

ORGANIZATION OF CLUBS ENCOURAGED

Movement Receiving Special Attention from the County Agent's Department.

BOYS AND GIRLS INTERESTED

Five-Acre Corn Growing Contest Attractive to Men—County Meeting to be Held Saturday.

The county agent's department is rapidly becoming an organization of clubs. This movement was inaugurated last year but is receiving more encouragement this spring and by the middle of March the organization of various clubs will be completed ready for aggressive campaigns. Club work is advocated by the extension department of Purdue University under which the county agents work, and is recommended as one of the best methods of creating and maintaining interest in the better farming movement.

County Agent Cobb is visiting all the schools in the county for the purpose of presenting the aims of the corn testing campaigns and also to encourage the organization of pig clubs, corn clubs, cow testing clubs, domestic science work and other phases of agricultural activity. The extension department of Purdue offers a free trip to Lafayette at the time of the Short Course to the winners in the various townships in each of these clubs and it is the intention of the county agent to have each township in this county represented at the next Short Course.

It is stated that growing interest is shown in the boys' pig club throughout the county. Breeders have volunteered to sell pigs to the members of the organization for half price and less and this offer has served to stimulate interest.

The men's five-acre corn growing contest is also attracting attention

GEORGE WASHINGTON

GEORGE WASHINGTON, the first President of the United States, was born on February 22, 1732, in the state of Virginia. In 1755 he served as a Colonel under the unfortunate General Braddock, who fell a victim to his own haughtiness and imprudence. On that occasion Washington gave strong proofs of his great military courage and skill, particularly in conducting the retreat of the army. He held the command of the Virginia troops until 1758, when he resigned on account of poor health, and was then elected a member of the Assembly from Frederick County, and later from Fairfax County. When the breach between the Colonies and Great Britain was widened by mutual animosity beyond any hope of reconciliation, the eyes of his countrymen were fixed upon this commander, Washington, and accordingly, in June, 1775, he took supreme command of the entire Continental Army, at Cambridge, Mass. The complete history of George Washington, this great patriot for the next few years, is the history of the Revolution. We are chiefly indebted to him for the independence which was finally secured by a treaty of peace signed in the year of 1783. In 1789, he was elected President of the United States; at this time he left his beautiful estate and moved to his new home in the City of Philadelphia, where he was received with the applause which he had so well merited. His government was characterized by that well-tempered prudence which always distinguished his conduct. He held office as President of the United States for two terms, and refused a third term. In 1798, he accepted the command of the United States Army, which he held till his death, on December 14, 1799. He was buried at Mount Vernon. Behind the White House, at Washington, rises the Washington Monument, a great rectangular obelisk of marble which dominates the entire city and is visible for many miles. It perpetuates the memory of the Father of his Country. Its construction was aided by individual citizens during the period of its erection, from 1848 to 1884. It is 555 feet in height, resting on a base only 55 feet square.

SEES BENEFITS OF HISTORICAL CLUB

METHOD OF PRESERVING DATA

Splendid Opportunity Would be Given for Collecting and Arranging Information.

(Written by Prof. J. H. Thomas, Superintendent of the Medora Schools and chairman of the committee to promote the organization of a Jackson County Historical Society.)

In the celebration of the State Centennial, Jackson county should keep pace with the leading counties of the State. A number of things have already been suggested by the County Centennial Committee and among them a Jackson County Historical Society. The need of such an organization was clearly set forth in an editorial in the Seymour Republican some weeks ago, and no more fitting time could be found for launching such a movement than this centennial year. Jackson County was one among the first to be settled and organized. Its organization as a county antedates the admission of Indiana as a State into the Union by about a year. It is a historic spot. Around Old Vallonia have occurred pioneer scenes and Indian depredations that, if all the facts were known, would thrill the soul of a student of history. About the old fort, built there in 1813, have been told tales of romance, which if properly woven into fiction, might rival that of Alice of Old Vincennes. Among the descendants of the old pioneers who first came to this county in the early dawn of the nineteenth century, may be found old relics and fragments of early history that would be invaluable to a county history. Treasured in the memories of the descendants of the Ewings, the McAfees, the Durhams, the Carrs and other early settlers

CIRCUIT COURT TO CONVENE MONDAY

Preparations are Practically Completed for Opening of the February Term.

SEVERAL NEW CASES FILED

G. H. Anderson, Local Grain Dealer, Seeks $200 Damages from Pennsylvania Company.

With the opening of the February term of the Jackson circuit court less than a week away preparations have been practically completed to set the wheels of justice in motion. Judge Swails will adjourn court in Lawrence county the last of this week and the new term in this county will convene Monday. Several cases which were continued from the last term will come to trial and a number of new actions are being filed. During the last few days the attorneys have manifested increased activity and are filing motions and new cases. The first of the new term will not likely see a great amount of work accomplished because of the primaries to be held March 7. Many attorneys are active in politics and desire to devote their attention to the campaign. After the primaries, however, the work will probably be heavy.

The jurors were drawn by the jury commissioners Monday and Sheriff Robertson will notified the various men whose names were drawn that they will be expected to serve at any time during the term on notice. Usually jury cases are set several days in advance of the trials so that the jurors can be notified in ample time.

Several new cases have been filed during the last few days. G. H. Anderson, of this city is the plaintiff in a suit against the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. He asks $200 damages. It is alleged that the plaintiff delivered to the defendant 85,120 pounds of shelled corn to be carried by the defendant, as a common carrier, from its siding in the north part of the city of Seymour, and delivered to the Hodapp Hominy Company at another point in the said city; and the defendant received

FINAL NOTE TO BE SENT TO GERMANY

Negotiations Between Secretary Lansing and Ambassador Bernstorff Will Soon Cease.

UNDERSEA WARFARE IS ISSUE

President Planning to Give More Publicity to Negotiations with Foreign Powers.

By United Press.

Washington, Feb. 22.—An end of informal negotiations between Secretary Lansing and Ambassador Bernstorff and the dispatch of a final formal note to Germany emphasizing the need of an unequivocal assurance regarding submarine warfare has been practically decided upon by the administration.

One thing only, it is said, can intervene and that is the arrival from Berlin of definite assurance that the decree regarding the sinking of armed merchantmen without warning will not be put in effect March 1 as announced. The decree must be made to square with promises made by Germany in the Lusitania exchanges.

It is said the administration has come to the conclusion that the confidential discussion between the Secretary of State and the ambassador have outrun their usefulness in view of the present, apparent, impassive and the personal bad feeling that has grown up between the two diplomats.

Secretary Lansing conferred with President Wilson for half an hour at the White House today. He refused positively later to discuss his mission but it was learned the Lusitania negotiations were discussed.

The president is planning to give more publicity to negotiations with the foreign powers.

Strong pressure, not only from administration leaders, but from friends of the president, has been brought to bear on him to give the country a clear idea of the exact status of pending negotiations, just what this country desires of Germany and England and how long the country is going to pursue its "diplomatic chase" on the Lusitania case.

ANONYMOUS NOTES WARN AMERICANS

Passengers Booking Passage on Espagne to Sail Friday for Bordeaux Get Letters.

TEXT OF COMMUNICATION

Refers to Germany's New Submarine Policy Towards Armed Merchantmen Effective March 1.

By United Press.

New York, February 22.—Anonymous letters warning against taking passage on the French liner Espagne, because of the danger of submarine attacks, have been received by Americans intending to sail on the ship, according to reports reaching steamship officials here today. The ship sails Friday for Bordeaux.

Mrs. F. Banker Hilton made public a letter which she has received. It is similar to the anonymous warnings received by Americans who sailed on the Lusitania. There was an evident feeling of uneasiness in shipping circles here today as a result of the appearance of the anonymous notes. The new decree of Germany that armed merchantmen will be attacked by submarines without warning goes into effect March 1, it is stated. The Espagne is due to reach Bordeaux on March 5 and would therefore, be in hostile waters when the order becomes effective. The letter was enclosed in a typewritten addressed envelope and reads as follows:

"Madam: It is understood that you intend to sail within the next few days on the steamer Espagne for Bordeaux, France. You are doubtless aware of the submarine policy which is to come in effect any day and which is to be carried out rigorously irrespective of the nationality of the persons on board the vessels attacked. Assuming that you are aware of the unusual and unnecessary danger that you are subjecting yourself to, you are requested to receive this warning as definite and unquestionably necessary and which you are requested not to question, but to accept for the safety of yourself and that of your family."

SENTIMENT IN BERLIN IS FOR SUBMARINE WARFARE

General Feeling is That Americans Must Suffer if They Embark on Belligerent Ships.

By United Press.

Berlin, February 22.—No where in Berlin is there evident the slightest desire to withhold Germany's new submarine warfare because of protest from the United States. The general feeling is that Americans must suffer the consequences if they embark on belligerent merchantmen after March 1. The patient attitude displayed towards America during the Lusitania negotiations no longer exists, it was plain to-day, as the American feeling has hampered Germany in many of her plans.

WASHINGTON OFFICIALS ALARMED OVER WARNING

No Evidence that the Communication Originated from German Official Sources There.

By United Press.

Washington, February 22.—Officials were concerned to-day over anonymous warnings sent to persons who intend to take passage on the French liner Espagne at New York Friday from Bordeaux. There is no evidence here that the warnings originated from official German sources here. The state department has not been advised that the Espagne is armed.

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

George Washington's career was one of precedents. Practices and customs in national life which were adopted by him as the first president of the United States have been followed by the chief executives until the present time. After he completed two terms as president he was urged to become a candidate for the third time, and doubtless would have been re-elected, but he refused to accept the honor. Later presidents who were asked to accept the nomination after serving eight years followed the precedent established by Washington. That principle has become so firmly fixed upon the American people that any president who would seek a third term would be seriously handicapped before entering the campaign.

Washington endeared himself to the American people because of his patriotism. It was broad enough to include recognized rights of humanity. He foresaw the opportunity to strike for liberty for the United States and after that freedom was gained he was great enough to supervise the construction of an independent government.

Washington's work was largely one of construction. The years following immediately after the American Revolution were a critical period in the history of the country. The belief that a government by the colonies would endure was by no means general. England gave no assistance and actually expected a complete failure in the attempt to organize and maintain a representative government. But for the presence of a leader in whom the people imposed utmost confidence the plan would have failed. Washington gave his life to secure liberty for America and to organize a government that would be perpetuated through the ages to come.

Americans are proud that Washington is the father of their country. He typified the American spirit. His life is a lesson in patriotism. His tasks were herculean. His obstacles were many. His perseverance was undaunted. He fought valiantly on the field of battle and in congressional halls for liberty and freedom and because of his services these are the heritage of the American people.

COLLEGE STATISTICS.

Statistics recently issued by an Indiana college show that the girls are better students than the men. This is not startling information. Such statistics are rather expected. Perhaps girls are closer students than boys and devote more time to their studies. Yet, they probably do not become interested in so many phases of college life. The men are active in college politics and many other phases of college life which afford little attraction to the co-eds. Again, many boys are working their way through college and do not have the time for close, thorough work as do the girls who are supplied with money from home.

Discussing the condition the Indianapolis News editorially says:

Some educators profess to see in the record some "alarming educational symptoms." They argue, for one thing, that the showing indicates a tendency on the part of professors and instructors to make the studies, in coeducational institutions, more interesting to the women than to the men. This, in turn, argues a feminization of the curriculum. Vigor, in a sense, is squeezed out of it. And, as a result, the coeducational school is more for women than for men.

But that is a far-fetched argument, based more upon figures than upon common sense. It shows a study of statistics, but no study of the facts underlying the statistics. It does not take into consideration, for instance, that hundreds of men students are doing more work than that involved in study. Some of them are working their way through college; some are dependent upon their own resources for part of the income that keeps them in college. The young women, as a rule, have far less of this sort of thing to do. Then, again, the interests of the young man student are broader than those of the young woman student. College does and must mean more to them than what the curriculum represents.

It might be said that, while the young woman is giving her time almost wholly to study, the young man is giving only a part of his time to study. The rest of it he is giving to affairs that will equip him with experience essential to future contact with men and business. And that, of less importance to the young woman, is of great importance to the young man. This is not to say that the girl makes a "grind" of herself—that, of course, she does not do. But, on the whole, she studies more than the man. Yet, in his own way, the man is studying, too—he is learning what he must learn and what books will not teach him. It is not amiss to keep this in mind when the comparative scholastic records are compiled and examined.

While the government is giving attention to naval preparedness every community can do something for army preparedness. Transportation is important in mobilizing an army. No longer do the army heads have to depend upon rail facilities. This is a motor age and automobiles can be utilized in transporting both troops and equipment. Such transportation, however, cannot be most successful until the public highways are in good condition. A few hours and even a few minutes mean great advantage to an army. If the time should ever come, we hope it never shall, when motor vehicles are needed for war purposes the communities that have constructed good roads will have done a great service for their country.

Under the heading of "One Hundred Leading Hossiers," appearing in the Republican from day to day is running a brief sketch of the life of General John Tipton. He was a resident of this county for a number of years and it was under his leadership that the Indians were put to flight after a battle on what is now known as Tipton's Island, several miles above Rockford.

The Indiana legislature will never be required to enact a law to prevent the state public service commission from exceeding the speed limit in disposing of petitions for hearings concerning utility questions.

If Edison or Burbank could devise some method by which "the fever" could be removed from spring they would perform a great work for humanity.

PERU COUNCIL FACES THE QUESTION OF NEW CITY HALL

Action Agreeing to Construct City Home is Rescinded and Issue is Up Again.

By United Press.
Peru, Ind., February 22—There is considerable speculation among the citizens of the city in regard to what action the members of the city council will take tonight in the matter of the proposed city hall. The council some weeks ago decided to build a city hall, costing about $100,000. At the last meeting, the council, for some unknown reason rescinded all action in the matter. Some citizens are demanding that a new city hall be built and at tonight's meeting the council is expected either to take back the rescinding action or explain why the architects who have already been selected by the council, should not be employed.

Peru never has had a city hall and the agitation for a city municipal building has been on for years. After much wrangling at a number of special meetings called for the selection of architects. Toledo architects were selected on the first ballot over fifteen prominent architects located in this and other states.

The architects selected by the council will be present at tonight's meeting and will demand that the building be constructed or that they be paid a certain amount of money. A damage suit against the city is assured unless the council goes ahead with the construction of the building.

Dwelling of Frank Scott, North of Freetown, Burned Monday

A farm house one mile north of Freetown, occupied by Frank Scott, was totally destroyed by fire Monday morning. The fire was caused by a defective flue. Part of the household goods were saved. The loss was partly covered by insurance. The place, which is known as the Wilburn Acton farm, is owned by a Mr. Reed, of Indianapolis.

How Mr. Davis Got Rid of a Bad Cough.

"Some time ago I had a very bad cough," writes Lewis T. Davis, Blackwater, Del. "My brother McCabe Davis gave me a small bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. After taking this I bought half a dozen bottles of it but only used one of them as the cough left me and I have not been troubled since." Obtainable everywhere.

NEWSY PARAGRAPHS

August Schafstall, of Hamilton township, was in town Monday looking after business interests. He reports the roads as settling rapidly in his part of the township.

Workmen are busy repairing the room recently vacated by the Philadelphia Bargain Store and which is to be occupied by the Simon Dry Goods Co. Mr. Simon expects to move his stock this week and be ready for business Saturday in his new location.

Herbert Durham and William Alexander have opened up a vulcanizing plant at 120 E. Second street. They have purchased the vulcanizing business of J. H. Williams and Son, of Ewing street, and will do an exclusive vulcanizing and tire repair business. Mr. Alexander has been connected with the Williams firm, and Mr. Durham is a former B. & O. S-W. engineer.

As a Pay-Up feature, the Interstate Public Service Co. is serving a free lunch to business men and shoppers every day this week, from 11 to 1 o'clock. Tempting electrically prepared luncheons are being served, and many are availing themselves of the company's offer. The luncheon today was in keeping with Washington's birthday. The beautiful new salesroom of the company, with the attractive window displays, showing the latest things in electrical equipment, have attracted the attention of callers at the office.

MINISTER LOUDLY PRAISES TANLAC

The Rev. E. T. Miles, of West Terre Haute, Relieved by Master Medicine.

Terre Haute, Ind., February 21, 1916—A minister of the gospel has added his words of praise to that of thousands of other Indiana people who have been benefited by "Tanlac, the Master Medicine." He is the Rev. E. T. Miles, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church, West Terre Haute, Ind. He said:

"Tanlac appealed to me because I knew of the good it was doing others. I suffered from indigestion and catarrhal affection. I also had a slight kidney trouble. Shortness of breath annoyed me considerably and, at times, I was so nervous I could not rest at night.

"I sleep fine, now, since taking Tanlac, and feel stronger and am better in every way. The stomach trouble has been relieved and my stomach has been very much benefited. Tanlac has given me great relief and I am glad to recommend it to my friends."

The words of praise and commendation of such prominent men as the Rev. Mr. Miles, men who stand for righteousness, honesty, and integrity, in their community, should prove the merits of Tanlac. Tanlac is especially beneficial for stomach, liver and kidney troubles and is a tonic, invigorant appetizer and blood purifier.

Tanlac is sold exclusively in Seymour at Carter's drug store.

THE MESEKE JEWELRY SHOP

"Birth of a Nation" at Louisville Another Week.

The sale of seats for "The Birth of a Nation," at Macauley's Theatre, at Louisville, has so far exceeded expectations that the management has arranged to extend the engagement until February 26th. Seats are now on sale at the box office.

During the engagement the curtain rises promptly at 2:15 o'clock in the afternoon and 8:15 at night. The performance lasts nearly three hours. Owing to the long lines of ticket purchasers and the crowded condition of the lobby, it is advisable to purchase seats in advance.

The new theatric art invented by David W. Griffith in producing "The Birth of a Nation" has enabled him to surpass such stage spectacles as "Ben Hur," "The Garden of Allah," "Joseph and His Brethren" and "The Bluebird." Such productions seem small in comparison with the Griffith spectacle. f24d are facts and stories of pioneer life eminently worth recording and saving.

No better agency for unearthing, collecting, and preserving historical information could be devised than a Jackson County Historical Society. The first step, that of perfecting an organization, is to be taken at Seymour next Saturday, February 26, at the meeting of the County Centennial Committee. Not only the members of the committee but all other persons interested in this movement are invited to attend and take part in the organization. After the society is organized, all of the schools and every citizen of the county should be enlisted to assist in collecting historical material. Carr township has already provided for a fund to be used as prize money for the best histories of Carr township written by a member of the public schools. Other townships are planning to do the same thing. Outlines for these histories should be made as uniform as possible and should include facts concerning the early settlements, places of historical interest, progress in industries, and history of the churches and schools. This would yield a considerable amount of information. In addition to this some competent persons should be employed by the society to correspond with persons who could not be reached in this way, but who know something of the county's history. Much material might be found in the court house and in the old newspaper files in the county, and if possible some one should travel over the county to some extent and talk with some of the old people whose minds are yet fresh with memories of early days in Jackson county.

After all the material has been collected then some one should be selected as historian to sort it out, arrange it, and formulate it into a history of the county. There are other things we may do in the celebration of our State Centennial but nothing perhaps would do more honor to the county and work a more lasting benefit to its people than the work of a County Historical Society.

ONE HUNDRED LEADING HOOSIERS 1816-1916

(Prepared for the United Press by the Centennial Department of the Indiana
Historical Commission.)

John Tipton, (4) 1786-1839.

In 1819 General Tipton was elected a member of the legislature and was appointed on the committee that selected Indianapolis as the permanent seat of government. Re-elected in 1822 he was selected as one of the commissioners to locate the boundary line between Indiana and Illinois. For several years he served Indiana in the United States senate. Politically he was a friend of Andrew Jackson but he opposed with all his power the president's warfare upon the United States bank. He repeatedly urged that the bank be given a new charter for he believed it a necessity and its issues the best currency the people had ever enjoyed. The greatest political triumph of Senator Tipton was that of forcing the senate to change its vote and ratify the treaty ceding the Miami and Pottawatomie reservations to the United States. The treaty when first proposed had received only four votes in its favor; but two days later, Senator Tipton by sheer force of argument secured its adoption by a unanimous vote.

True Secret of Keeping Youthful Looking

(The Beauty Seeker.)

"The real secret of keeping young-looking and beautiful," says a well-known hygienist, "is to keep the liver and bowels normally active. Without these requisites, poisonous waste products remain in the system, polluting the blood and lodging in various organs, tissues, joints. One becomes flabby, obese, nervous, mentally sluggish, dull-eyed, wrinkled and sallow of face."
"But to get liver and bowels working as they ought, without producing evil after-effects has been the problem. Fortunately, there is a prescription of unquestioned merit, which may now be had in convenient tablet form. Its value is due largely to an ingredient derived from the humble May apple, or its root, which has been called 'vegetable calomel' because of its effectiveness—though, of course, it is not to be classed with the real calomel of mercurial origin. There is no habit-forming constituent in 'sentinel' tablets—that's the name—and their use is not followed by weakness or exhaustion. On the contrary, these harmless vegetable tablets tend to impart tone and elasticity to the relaxed intestinal wall. Sentinel tablets, which may be procured from any druggist—a dime's worth will do—will prove a revelation to any constipated, liver-troubled person."

The Constipation Curse

Constipation—clogged bowels cause pain and sickness; 95 per cent of our ills, say the authorities. Sentinel Laxatives bring quick relief. All vegetable—contain no calomel. Ten doses for a dime at any druggist. Physician's sample free, upon request, if you mention this advertisement. The Sentinel Remedies Co., Inc., 800 Madison Ave., Covington, Ky.

"Indeed, sir is that so?" said Donald. "It's a verra gran' thing for him." Then he paused and scratched his head, while a puzzled expression came over his face. "Beg pardon, sir," he added, "but will he be able to keep baith jobs?"—Boston Transcript.

Teacher (to class): "In this stanza what is meant by the line, 'The shades of night were falling fast?'"

Clever Scholar: "The people were pulling down the blinds."

"Alfalfa Bill's" Pet.

Mrs. Vernon Castle, with her pampered monkey that she carries around with her has not got a thing on "Alfalfa Bill" Murray, the Oklahoma congressman, who orated at the Seymour chautauqua last August, according to a story being told in Washington, appeared on the floor of the House the other day with a tame mouse clinging to the lapel of his coat. Of course, the mouse did not stay permanently on the lapel, but scampered playfully around the shoulders of the congressman and up and down his back.

"Alfalfa Bill" found the mouse on the Republican side of the House where it apparently prefers to reside. He caught it by the tail and picked it up. The mouse sat for a time on "Alfalfa Bill's" knee and listened attentively to an address on agriculture that was being delivered by Representative J. Willard Ragsdale of South Carolina and lost itself under "Alfalfa Bill's" coat. Later "Alfalfa Bill" located the mouse resting in the inside pocket of his coat.

The Oklahoman said he thought the mouse was the same one he had found during the last session of Congress. He did not say whether he recognized the mouse or the mouse recognized him. On that occasion he placed the mouse on the shoulder of Representative Victor Murdock of Kansas and nearly scared that gentleman out of the Progressive party.

However, mice do not worry "Alfalfa Bill" in the least and it is doubted in congressional circles that Mrs. Vernon Castle will have the courage to rival him.

Charles Graessle went to Cincinnati this morning on business.

What's the matter with your baking lately?

Hundreds of women have lately been realizing that their baking isn't so good as it used to be. The bread bakes heavy and solid around the edges and it isn't so white nor so fine in texture as their bread used to be. And no matter how careful they are, their cake and pastry just won't "come out right", for some reason or other.

Haven't you noticed the difference in your baking? Maybe you hadn't thought of there being any special reason for not getting good results; just thought it was a "run of bad luck"; but there is a reason, a reason that has nothing to do with your skill in baking.

Let us tell you what the trouble is.

Last season was the worst for wheat in fifty years. Wheat nearly all over America was badly damaged by too much rain. Sections that, in past seasons, grew the finest grade of wheat for flour making, had nothing but rain-damaged wheat to sell. Naturally, rain-damaged wheat doesn't make good flour; it hasn't strength and vitality, and the too-much moisture sets up a fermentation which spoils the rising qualities of flour made from this wheat.

As an example of how scarce high-grade wheat is and how hard to get, we examined 300 cars of wheat in a single day and found only one carload containing the high quality wheat demanded for making Valier's Enterprise Flour.

The moment we learned how exceedingly scarce high-grade wheat was, we sent our own men to every section of the country where any A-1 wheat at all was grown, and paid premium prices to get it for our mills. Thus by foresight, prompt action and premium prices, we got enough of the highest grade wheat, and, as a result, we can keep our flour up to the highest standard of quality. That's the reason why you'll find Valier's Enterprise one flour that now has the same high quality it has always had. Its quality has not been lessened one iota.

The difference between Valier's Enterprise Flour and ordinary flour is great, even under normal conditions, but now the superiority of Valier's Enterprise Flour is more marked than ever.

If you want to make sure of getting good results from your baking—whatever kind of baking you do—ask your grocer for Valier's Enterprise Flour.

To maintain the high quality of Valier's Enterprise Flour costs us more money, naturally; and it costs you a few cents more per sack. But the far better baking results, the fact that you'll have no waste through baking failures, and the fact that you'll get more actual baking per sack than from an equal amount of ordinary flours, makes Valier's Enterprise Flour the most economical to use. For instance, a lady writes us, "I can get more loaves of bread out of a given number of pounds of Valier's Enterprise Flour than out of any of the many high grade flours that I have ever used—and I believe I have tried them all."

Just once, won't you please insist on getting Valier's Enterprise Flour? We absolutely guarantee that it will make whiter, finer bread, better cake and pastry, and that it will go farther, pound for pound, than any flour you have ever used.

Put this flour to a test—order a trial sack from your grocer today.

and accepted said corn and undertook to carry and deliver the same as above stated. Plaintiff further avers that the defendant did not safely carry said shipment of corn, but carelessly and negligently suffered and permitted 31,750 pounds thereof to be extracted and removed from said ear in transit by persons and means unknown to the plaintiff and delivered to said Hodapp Hominy Company 53,370 pounds to the plaintiff's loss of $200.

A case venued from Scott county and filed by Maude Gordon vs. Edward Jones, involves damages to the amount of $2,500. The plaintiff complains of the defendant that on July 26, 1915 in the city of Jeffersonville, Indiana, he wrongfully assaulted and beat the plaintiff and wounded, bruised and injured her body, face, hands and limbs and as a direct result she was rendered sick and sore and required medical attention. The plaintiff further says that she was permanently injured in body and health and contracted a nervous disease and her ability to work and earn money was greatly lessened.

The Jackson County Loan & Trust Company is plaintiff against H. Frank Brown, J. Bicknell Love, et al., on note, demanding $1,000.

Herschel M. Peacock has filed suit for divorce from Mary C. Peacock. He alleges cruel and inhuman treatment, that she told him she would poison him and refused to cook for him. He also alleges that she ordered him from the house and refused in any way to have anything to do with him.

Barbara K. Barkhimer is plaintiff in a suit for divorce from William H. Barkhimer. Plaintiff and defendant were married November 8, 1894 and separated February 11, 1916. Charges are made of cruel and inhuman treatment and drunkenness. The plaintiff asks a divorce and $500 alimony and the custody of their son and for his support and maintenance.

Amma Waskom seeks a divorce from Owen Waskom. Parties have been separated since January 1912. Plaintiff alleges abandonment and failure to provide.

and it is expected that a large number of farmers will compete. County Agent Cobb is expecting to offer prizes aggregating $50 to the winners. If cash prizes to this amount are guaranteed the contestants become members of the state five-acre contest and each producing one hundred bushels or more to the acre will receive a medal from Purdue. No trouble will be experienced in securing the prize money, it is believed. The Seymour National Bank has volunteered to give $25 of the amount. The county agent is endeavoring to increase the prizes to $50 so that the contestants can compete for the medals.

The organization of the Jackson County Farm Bureau will be effected at Brownstown Saturday, according to the plans of the county agent. This will be a county association and will embrace all the other organizations. This association will take up in a detailed way methods of co-operative sales, greater production, fertilizing and other questions pertaining to farm life in general. The Bureau will bring together all the other organizations.

It is planned to have the clubs organized and ready for work by the middle of March. The county agent has already visited most of the county schools as a part of this movement and will speak at the others before that time. He will probably appoint a lieutenant in each locality to assist him in completing the various organizations.

Lee Dobbins went to Brownstown this morning on a business trip.

The Evidence Is at Your Door.

Seymour proof is what you want and the statement of this highly respected resident will banish all doubt:

Mrs. Laura Arnold, 724 W. Laurel St., Seymour, says: "I suffered from kidney trouble a whole summer and when Fall came on, I got so bad I could hardly keep going. My back was sore and weak and I had dreadful pains across my loins, which sapped my energy. I could hardly stand long enough to wash the dishes. The kidney secretions were too frequent in passage and I had inflammation of the bladder. I became nervous and irritable. I couldn't sleep well. I got Doan's Kidney Pills at Meyer's Drug Store and they did me a lot of good, relieving all symptoms of kidney complaint."

Chapter XIX

At last the rains came to the valley and Fazenda Flores. Gerry spent long hours beside his sluiceway watching for a rise in the river, but it did not come. The torrent of rain was local and he remembered that Lieber had told him that the floods—the great floods—came from hundreds of miles up the river and generally under a brazen sky. Night, black night, had fallen with the rain and he was just turning to seek shelter from the unbroken downpour when a voice raised in song reached his ears. He waited. The voice drew nearer. In a nasal tone, which somehow sounded familiar though it was unknown to him, it was chanting a long string of doggerel ending in an unvarying refrain. Finally Gerry could make out the long-drawn tail-end of the song: "comin' down the drawr."

English! American! Cowboy music! The impressions came in rapid succession. Gerry strove to pierce the darkness. He could hear the nearby splash of careful mules, picking their way through puddles with flinching little steps. He felt a shadow in the darkness and could just see above it a blur of yellow. Behind it, more shadows. On an impulse he did not stop to measure, he shouted in English, "Hallo, there!"

The doggerel was choked off in mid-flight. The yellow blur came to a sudden stop and the nasal voice rang out in quick staccato, "Speak again, stranger, and speak quick!"

"It's all right," Gerry laughed back. "Where are you bound for?"

"I'm headed down the drawr lookin' for a chalk line where I c'n dry my feet. What do you know?"

"Can you see the water in the ditch at your right?"

"Yasser, I can. I c'n see you, too."

"Well," shouted back Gerry, "your eyes beat mine. Follow the ditch until you come to a bridge. I'll meet you there."

Gerry found the little cavalcade waiting for him, six pack-mules, a native driver and, towering above them, a great lanky figure in a yellow oil-skin slicker topped by a broad-brimmed Stetson. Gerry looked over the outfit as carefully as the darkness would allow and then said tentatively, "There's a house down there in the valley."

"Is the?" drawled the stranger spitting deliberately into the ditch. "Well," he volunteered after a further pause, "my name's Jake Kemp. The rest of this outfit is six mules packin' orchids and the greaser packin' the mules."

"That's all right," said Gerry, "I guess we can put you up."

He led the way and the pack-train splashed along after him. The mules were soon relieved of their burdens and turned into the pasture. Bonifacio took the native muleteer away to his quarters and Gerry and the stranger passed through the house to the kitchen.

A patriarchal hospitality came naturally to the inmates of Fazenda Flores. It was a tradition not only on that plantation but throughout a vast hinterland, where life was rude and death sudden, to be gentle to the stranger, to feel him and his beast and to speed him on in the early morning. There was but one rule to the stranger: He must keep his eyes to the front. Jake Kemp had evidently learned the brief code. He ate ravenously, poured down coffee with the recklessness of a man that draws on a limitless power to sleep, and made his few remarks to Gerry and to Gerry alone.

Gerry was feeling a strange elation that he strove in vain to account for. This was an American but beyond that they had nothing in common. New York and Texas are connected only by fiction. Perhaps it was just curiosity. Curiosity invaded him. What was a Texas cowboy doing on the road past Fazenda Flores with a mule-train of orchids? As an opener he declared himself. "My name's Gerry Lansing," he said. "I've settled down here."

"So?" said Kemp, as he drew from his vest pockets the makings of a cigarette. Gerry had seen the yellow papers and the little bags of flaked tobacco. They struck convincingly the note of the West. "Reckon you're f'm the States," drawled Kemp as he accomplished the cigarette.

"Yes," said Gerry and added, with an idea to establishing a link, "like you."

"Reckon you're f'm Noo Yawk," was Kemp's next deliberate contribution to the conversation.

With that, talk lagged. Gerry instinctively avoided the question direct and Kemp vouchsafed nothing more. Not till Gerry came upon him hitching up his loads early next morning did he speak again and then he said with a glint in his eye that was almost a smile, "I guess them's the first orchids that ever traveled to market under a diamond hitch."

Here was an opening but it came too late. Gerry did not try to follow it up. Once more in the saddle Kemp seemed to acquire a sudden new ease of body and mind. He hung by one knee and a stirrup and leaned over toward Gerry. "Stranger," he said, "I'm much obliged to ye. It's a long way f'm the Alamo to Noo Yawk, but the bull country's under one fence." He waved his hand and was gone after his pack-train, lifting his mule with his goose-necked spurs into a protesting canter. Two weeks after his passing, as evening was settling on Fazenda Flores, the echo of a mule's mincing steps on the bridge made Gerry look up from his work.

"Howdy," said Kemp and paused on that to measure his welcome. He was satisfied and urged his tired mule on towards the house. Gerry walked beside him and learned that the shipment of orchids had just caught the steamer at the coast. Kemp unsaddled his mule and tossed the harness and slicker upon the veranda. As Gerry was closing the gap into the pasture Kemp came up and stood beside him. He cast a knowing eye over the fat stock. "You done a good job for Lieber," he remarked.

Gerry nodded a little sadly. "Yes," he said, "the contract's filled. Lieber's sending for the stock day after tomorrow."

As they sat on the veranda that night smoking endless cigarettes, Kemp turned to his host. "D'y'e mind if I stay over a day with you? Truth is, I want to help drive that stock up to Lieber's. I want to help whistle a bunch o' steers along once more and smell the dust an' the leakin' udders, an' I shouldn't wonder if I let out a yell or so, corralin' 'em at the other end."

Gerry nodded understandingly. "Why did you leave it?" he ventured and then regretted and murmured, "Never mind."

But Kemp was not offended. "Naw," he said, "I hain't killed my man—not lately—nor anything like that. I left it," he went on reminiscently, "because I couldn't help it. I got to dreamin' nights of purple cities."

"Purple what?" exclaimed Gerry. Kemp took a cigarette from his mouth and almost smiled. "Never did hear of The Purple City, I reckon?" Gerry shook his head. Kemp drew a well-worn wallet from the capacious inner pocket of his vest and took out a ragged clipping. One could read in the glaring moonlight and Gerry glanced through the printed lines. Then he read them through again.

THE PURPLE CITY.
As I sat munching mangoes,
On the purple city's walls,
I heard the catfish calling,
To the crawfish in the crawls.
I saw the paper sunbeams,
Sprouting from the painted sun;
I saw the sun was sullen,
For the day had but begun.

Of dusty desert sky-road,
Ten thousand miles and more,
Stretched out before the morning,
And the sun sat in the door.
He sweated seas of sunshine,
As he started up the sky,
And he drowned the purple city,
In a tear-drop from his eye.

No more shall purple pansies
Look up at purple pinks,
Nor purple roses rival,
The cheeks of purple minx.
Alas! for purple city,
And its purple-peopled halls!
Alas! for me and mangoes,
On the purple city's walls!

Gerry looked upon his guest with new wonder as he handed back the clipping. Kemp put it away carefully, rolled a fresh cigarette, and blew a thick puff of smoke out into the moonlight. "Can't say it's poetry and I can't say it ain't. All I know is it roped me. I know that writer feller never munched no mangoes, 'cause mangoes don't munch. I know he never sat on no wall an' heard catfish callin' 'cause catfish don't call. But he seen it all, stranger, jest the way he writ it down an' I b'en dreamin' purple cities ever sence I read his screed."

"Did you start right out to look for them?" asked Gerry gravely.

"Naw," said Kemp, "I didn't have nothin' to go on. But one day a drummer feller that I was stagin' across the White mountains give me a plant magazine, and it had an article on commercial orchids with pictures in colors. They was mostly kinder publish an' I reckon it was that what got me started. It was the foreman pointin' out my mount to me an' I didn't lose no time. I dropped my rope on him an' I've been ridin' him ever sence."

"Found any purple cities?"

"Not rightly. I seen 'em—more'n once. But I guess purple cities is always you side the mountain. You can't jest ride up an' put your brand on 'em. They're born mavericks and they die mavericks. An' I say, good luck to 'em." Kemp rose, tossed away his cigarette end and stood leaning with crooked elbow and knee against a veranda pillar. His keen aquiline features and deep-set eyes were lit up by the moonlight and seemed scarcely to belong to his great, loose-jointed frame. He was loose-jointed but like a flail—strong and tough. "There's one thing about the purple cities," he added, "the daylight always beats you to 'em jest like in the po'm." He turned and went off to bed.

Gerry sat on in the moonlight seized by a strange sadness—the sadness the spirit feels under the troubled hovering of the unattainable and the mirage. Life had queer turns. Why should a cowboy start out to look for purple cities? It was grotesque on the face of it but, beneath the face of it, it was not grotesque.

Charles Inman, 424 East Chestnut street, Hartford City, Ind., was desperately ill with stomach trouble. He was advised to go to Fort Wayne for an operation.

Then he took Mayr's Wonderful Remedy and in a short time was able to go back to work. In a letter he said:

"My disease started seven years ago. I had to give up and go to bed. Four doctors said they could not cure me unless I went to Fort Wayne to be operated on, and that it would cost $150 or $200. My daughter saw your advertisement and I took your treatment. In three weeks I went to work and haven't missed but one-half day since from sickness. It surely saved my life."

Margarita stole out to seat herself beside him. She slipped her hand into his. She was worried. She was always worried when Gerry's thoughts were far away. "The Man," she said, for thus she had christened her baby boy from the day of his birth, "the Man sleeps. He cried for thee and thou didst not come. So he slept, for he is a man."

Gerry's thoughts came back to his little kingdom. He sighed and then he smiled a smile of content. "It is late then, my flower?" He put his arm around her. "Let us go to bed, for tomorrow there is work."

"Tomorrow there is always work," said Margarita. "I am not afraid of work. Gerec. The end of work never comes. It is the things that end that make me afraid." She, too, had felt the fluttering wings of the unattainable. Unknowingly she stood beneath the shadow of the stranger's purple city's walls.

The next day Kemp tried honestly to help Gerry with the tilling of the soil but the effort was still-born. Kemp had almost forgotten how to walk and his high-heeled boots fell foul of every hummock. He wandered off to the house with solemn face. When Gerry came in to the midday meal, he found him with a saddle propped on the arm of a bench giving the delighted swaddled heir to Fazenda Flores his first lesson in equitation.

That night they sat again on the veranda steps but Kemp was not talkative. He whittled a stick until it disappeared in a final curly shaving and then immediately started on a fresh one.

"Known Lieber long?" asked Gerry at last.

"Goin' on two years," replied Kemp.

"Does he live off his stock?"

Kemp looked up. "Haven't you ever been up to Lieber's?"

"No," said Gerry, "it's two years since I came here and I've never been off the place. Lieber's been down here a couple of times."

Kemp grunted but asked no further question. "Lieber," he said, "certainly don't live off his stock—he plays with it. Lieber is the goatskin king. Ships 'em by the thousand baies. If you or any other man in these parts was to sell a goatskin away f'm Lieber, you'd be boycotted. Lieber on this range is God—you're fer him or you're ag'in him an' there ain't b'en any one ag'in him for some spell now."

"Oh," said Gerry.

"As fer knowin' him," continued Kemp, "everybody on this round-up knows Lieber but there ain't anybody knows why he is. Lieber holds questions and smallpox about alike. He ain't thar when they happen."

SOCIAL EVENTS

CRYSTAL LUNCHEON

Mesdames Lynn Faulkner, W. F. Peter and C. H. Williams were hostesses this afternoon at the home of Mrs. Faulkner, West Second street, to the members of the Seymour Tuesday Club at an elaborate 1 o'clock luncheon in celebration of the fifteenth anniversary of the organization of the club. The hostesses are charter members and this year are members of the program committee.

The appointments for the luncheon were brilliant, and appropriate to the celebration of Washington's Birthday flags and National Colors predominated in the house decorations. In the spacious reception hall long banners of red, white and blue were attractively draped along the stairway. Around the windows and archways were large flags and a ball made of small flags was suspended from the chandelier. The parlor, library and dining room were also prettily decorated with flags. In the several corners were large ferns, and other greenery and cut flowers used in the decorations produced a most pleasing effect.

The dining table was beautiful with its unique decorations of National Colors. The center piece consisted of a handsome brass basket out of which appeared the flags of many nations. Surrounding the basket was an abundance of simlax which almost concealed it. On either side of the center piece and towards the ends of the polished table was a smaller basket of flags the top of which just appeared above the simlax wreaths. The arrangement of the dining table was not only artistic but showed great originality. It was arranged for eleven plates for the eleven active charter members present. The first roster of membership carried thirty names and of this number twelve are still affiliated with the Club, but one, Mrs. Ida Sandau, is out of the city.

In the library, adjoining the dining room, small tables were placed for the fifteen members who have joined the club since the charter membership roll was closed. The color motif in this room was the same as in the dining room, a small center piece of uniform design adorning each table. The place cards were miniature hatchets. Each guest was presented with a beautiful rock crystal basket as a souvenir of the crystal anniversary of the club.

During the luncheon Mrs. Williams, the first president of the club gave an address of welcome and briefly outlined the organization, stating that it was organized February 26, 1901. Mrs. Anna C. Brown spoke in behalf of the charter members and was followed by Mrs. Sarah K. Shields, who spoke for the new members. An address of appreciation was also given by Mrs. Millison M. Groub, the president.

Following the luncheon the regular program was given. Mrs. Marie Smith gave interesting sketches of Vassar, Wellesley, Smith, Bryn Mawr and Radcliffe Colleges. A debate then followed, the subject being: "Does Higher Education Unfit Women for Domestic Life?" Arguments in the affirmative were presented by Mrs. W. F. Pfaffenberger and Mrs. Peter while the negative was defended by Mrs. E. A. Remy and Mrs. Groub. Mrs. John H. Conner presented a review of "Virginia" and "Hagar."

SIX O'CLOCK DINNER.

The members of the Needlecraft Club delightfully entertained for their husbands at a six o'clock dinner Monday night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Temple, North Poplar street. Small tables were arranged in the dining room and parlor for a company of sixteen. The decorations consisted of flowers and greenery. An elaborate course turkey dinner was served. After the tables were cleared a delightful evening of Rook was enjoyed.
